Item 8.01. Other Events.

On April 2, 2012, Yahoo! Inc. issued the following press statement:

Yahoo! has been moving aggressively to intensify its focus on delivering shareholder value – overhauling its Board of Directors and appointing a new CEO who is moving rapidly to re-shape the business. With a highly expert and independent Board, Yahoo!'s new leadership team and its employees are working hard to restore the company's growth and innovation and refocus its resources on key parts of the business that offer the greatest potential for growth. We believe our shareholders will understand that this is our priority and that our resources and attention are appropriately focused on reshaping and reigniting Yahoo!. With that in mind, we intend to communicate directly with our shareholders, employees, users, and customers about the new Yahoo! – its leadership, our plans, and our progress – and do not intend to respond to every statement from Third Point.

It is important to note that Yahoo! has been actively and openly soliciting constructive input from its major shareholders, including Third Point, regarding both the composition of its Board and the company's ongoing evolution. Unfortunately, Mr. Loeb rejected our efforts to bring Third Point's perspective into the board room through the offer of two board seats. Nevertheless, the Board made clear to Mr. Loeb that it remains open to hearing Third Point's ideas and to working constructively with Third Point, as with all of its shareholders. We look forward to continuing constructive dialogue with shareholders as we work to build Yahoo!'s forward momentum.
